ABSTRACT

The invention is a standardized stool-based assay kit for the diagnosis of food allergies. The assay is highly reliable and can be performed with no harm to the patient. The assay can be configured in a number of formats for optimization for use in a primary care or large clinical setting.